First National Center Goes Red on Valentine's Day in Tribute of Upcoming Renovation

Downtown landmark to make announcement regarding million-dollar renovation plans March 12

OKLAHOMA CITY – Dark red fluorescent lights will adorn the outdoor walls of the First National Center and monogrammed boxes of chocolates will be delivered to tenants Feb. 14 to mark the beginning of an upcoming renovation slated to begin March 12.

The dark red lights signify revitalization, renewal and the rebirth of the First National Center.

Monogrammed gold boxes of chocolates will be hand-delivered to tenants of the First National Center and other community leaders inviting them to attend a cocktail party where future renovation plans will be announced.

“Valentine’s Day marks an exciting beginning for the First National Center,” said Emily D. Dobson, property manager of the First National Center. “The red lights symbolize more than the holiday, it represents a new era and an exciting future for this beautiful building. The owners of the building have promised extensive renovations and they are ready to deliver.”

Milbank Real Estate, property managers of the First National Center have overseen infrastructure renovations, since the property was purchased in 2006. Since then, renovations have included:

- Fire alarm / life safety system
- Fire sprinkler installations
- Domestic house water pump
- Demolition of floors 4 - 14 (east building)
- Duct repair
- Sidewalk sealing
- Tower roof repairs
- Repairs to the main electrical systems
- Repair of the exterior clock at the corner of Robinson and Park.
