Milbank Real Estate Opens Great Banking Hall to the Public

Encourages Oklahomans to submit ideas on how to use the space

OKLAHOMA CITY-Milbank Real Estate, asset and property managers of downtown's historic First National Center, today announced they will hear ideas from the public on how to use the building's Great Banking Hall, a treasured community space in downtown Oklahoma City.

In line with the continuing renovations and restoration being performed by the owners of First National Center, Milbank Real Estate is looking for the public's opinions as to future uses for the Great Banking Hall. The effort is intended to bring the space back to life while preserving its past history, splendor and heritage.

Submissions do not need to be detailed or professional and can be as simple as a basic description, thought, or comment. Milbank is especially looking for an emphasis on creativity and usability of the space.

The most innovative and practical concept which is adopted by Milbank will be announced at the company's annual Holiday Party in December. The winning submission will receive a catered private party for 50, in the new Great Banking Hall, after its completion.

Submissions will be accepted through December 15th. All submissions must be made on the submission form to be provided by Milbank. Submission forms can either be obtained from Milbank's website at www.milbankre.com, sending an email to gbh@milbankre.com, or stopping by Milbank's office in Suite 300W of First National Center.
